An Inconvenient Tooth is a documentary film about fluoride by local filmmaker Guy Wagner. It was released September 6th, 2012 at the Portland City Hall. Mayor Sam Adams and Commissioner Randy Leonard watched the film before voting on fluoride. On September 12th the City Council unanimously voted to add fluoride to our water without a public vote even though Portland voters have rejected fluoride three times in the past. With the success of the signature gathering effort to put fluoridation on the ballot it is now up to all of us to decide if we want fluoride added to our water instead of five people in City Hall deciding for us. Everyone in Portland is invited to watch this film for free online or in the theater and decide if they agree with the judgement of the City Council or not. An Inconvenient Tooth is one tool that can help to sort out reality from myth and get to the truth about fluoride.
